

Why don't politicians listen?

Because they know how the system works. They can get elected even when most people in their riding vote against them. Their party can form a majority government even when the majority voted for other parties. So don't blame the politicians – blame the system.

Fair voting will force politicians to listen.

Fair voting will ensure that Parliament represents all of us.

If Canada adopts a fair voting system based on proportional representation:

- Every voter will have an equal voice, because every vote will really count
- Election results will be fair: all parties will get the portion of seats they deserve
- The parties that form the government will actually represent the majority
- Parliament will represent all of us – women and men, young and old, rural and urban, right and left
- Government will be more accountable to the majority, particularly on the most important issues of the day (e.g., environment, energy, taxes)
